PROVO, Utah, September 24, 2026 — The Utah Valley Convention Center is attracting attention to its in-house event services for planners organizing conferences, trade shows, corporate gatherings, weddings and other events in Provo. Its on-site teams provide food and beverage, audiovisual support, equipment and labor, electrical services, internet access and decorating.

The services allow planners to make a number of aspects of the event, coordinated at the venue. The center's culinary team offers food and beverage services, while the audiovisual technicians of the center can cater to a wide range of requests, from a projector package to the overall setup of a general session. The basic equipment in the rooms is tables and chairs, and additional equipment is provided if required at the event.

Support for Trade Shows and Exhibitors

For trade shows and exhibitions, Utah Valley Convention Center provides electrical service, internet options and decorating support. The convention center's engineering department arranges the required electricity for the exhibitors, including booths' equipment and exhibit stands' charging stations. The place also offers public Wi-Fi for the event's attendees. On the other hand, the venue's organizers can reserve a separate event network or wired connections if needed.

In addition, the staff can help set up trade show booth and table packages. For instance, the exhibitors can request the required electricity, equipment, and internet for their working places via the convention center's exhibitor services.

One Venue for Different Event Needs

The convention center is in downtown Provo and provides 83,578 square feet of versatile event space. The availability of meeting spaces, exhibition centers and specialized teams ensures that organizers can choose a venue suitable for events of varying size and specification.
